In September, we reached a significant milestone with our Transnational Project Meeting (TPM) held in Amsterdam, Netherlands. This gathering was not just a meeting of minds but a melting pot of diverse, creative ideas that are at the heart of the Epicurious project. We delved into deep discussions about our progress, challenges, and the exciting road ahead. The Amsterdam TPM was particularly special due to the enthusiastic participation and insightful contributions from all members, fostering an environment of collaboration and innovation

As we move forward, the focus is now shifting towards the piloting phase of our project. This phase is critical as it's where our strategies, tools, and methodologies will be put to the test in real-world scenarios. The piloting phase is not just a test of our work so far but an opportunity to refine our approaches based on actual user feedback and experiences.

The piloting phase is not just a step towards the completion of our project but a gateway to understanding and enhancing employability in the creative and cultural industries. Your continued support and active participation are what drive this project towards its impactful goals.

Stay tuned!
